FAQ

Q: What is your style of hair and makeup for brand shoots?

A: My style is polished, natural, and intentional. I focus on enhancing your features while ensuring your hair and makeup align with your brand identity and photograph beautifully across platforms.

Q: Should I book professional hair and makeup for a brand shoot?

A: Yes. Professional hair and makeup elevate your images, help you feel confident on camera, and ensure consistency across your website, social media, and marketing material.

Q: How long does hair and makeup take for a brand shoot?

A: Allow approximately 1.5–2 hours for hair and makeup, depending on the look, hair length and thickness.

Q: Do you stay on set for brand shoots?

A: I do not stay on set for brand shoots as standard. However, half-day or full-day rates can be advised should you require me to remain on set for touch-ups. If I am not staying, I will ensure your hair and makeup are set to last.

Q: How does dermaplaning help before a brand shoot?

A: Dermaplaning creates a smooth, refined base for makeup and helps skin look fresh and even on camera. It's ideal 1–2 weeks before your shoot.

Q: Why are brow lamination and a lash lift recommended for brand shoots?

A: Brow lamination gives structure and polish to the brows, while a lash lift enhances your natural lashes—perfect for clean, professional branding imagery.

Q: Should I get eyelash extensions for a brand shoot?

A: Eyelash extensions are a great option if you want extra definition without the need for strip lashes.

Q: Is a spray tan a good idea for a brand shoot?

A: Yes, a subtle spray tan can even out skin tone and add warmth, helping you look healthy and confident on camera. A trial is recommended for first-time clients.

Q: When should I book my pre-shoot treatments?

A: Dermaplaning 1–2 weeks before, brows and lashes 5–7 days before, eyelash extensions 2–3 days before, and your spray tan 2 days before your shoot.
